“Honouring indigenous and Global Food Wisdom”

Our farming journey at Art Village Karjat began in 2017 - a slow, steady unfolding of learning how to grow with the land. Along the way, we began creating indigenous and traditional food charts to better understand natural food systems and cycles.

Drawing inspiration from Ayurveda, local and global culinary influences, we've deepened our understanding of where our food comes from and how it nourishes us - body, mind and spirit. It's a blend of wisdom passed down through generations and flavours that travel across cultures.

At Art Village Karjat, we strive to follow a farm-to-table philosophy. While not everything we serve is grown on site, we make a conscious effort to grow a wide variety of ingredients - grains, pulses, seeds, vegetables, fruits, spices, and medicinal herbs - across our 7 - acre land sharing this space with the birds, bees and animals.

The food we serve is rooted in care - for the land, the people who grow it, and the many hands that help bring it to the table. From age old recipes whispered down from grandmother's to native preparations shared by farmers and global chefs alike, each meal carries with it a story, a memory, and a sense of belonging.
